New York Stock Market

New York, March 28 .- The extent of New York, March 28.—The extent of the price declines which were suffered in the stock market to-day was regarded ominously. The volume of sales was not heavy, and the wide concessions which had to be made to effect them argued a hollowness of the market which had a disquelting effect on sentiment. The superitical causes which were advanced in explanation were not considered adequate to account for the weakness of the market, and there were apprehensions of some undisclosed condition which was prompting the withdrawal of effective support by the financial powers. The later impression of the New York City bond sale is of a demonstration of overissues of new securities which promises ill for further financing. The upward trend in the wheat market directed attention to another source of anxiety. The news that reflecting fains had not been forthcoming in the three-day intervals while the Stock Exchange had been closed and sedzed upon by the bearlish clement in the speculation to force declines in prices. The copper securities shood out conspicuously in the day's weakness, and were of considerable sympathetic effect on the whole list. Advices from Boxton of a further slump in the price of Granby Consolidated Mining in that market brought with them large selling orders in other copper stocks. A heavy falling off in last week's copper exports was an additional item in the day's weakness may additional item in the day's influences against the group.

No one of these factors, nor all of them, was considered sufficient to account for the day's weakness. The anzapported state of the market aroused loars that the general trade and interests with the widest sources of information. The yielding tendency of the time loan market in the subsidence of demand from borrowers is pointed out as a possible symptom of declining mercantile activity.

Bonds were weak. Total sales, parvaine, $3,057,000.

United States bonds were unchanged on call, the price declines which were suffered in the stock market to-day was re-
